Free Neuroscience of Leadership Forum

In a series of forums we aim to bring together a group of HR, People and Culture, L&D, OD & Talent Leaders to discuss current challenges, hear insights and ideas about recent industry trends and from each other.

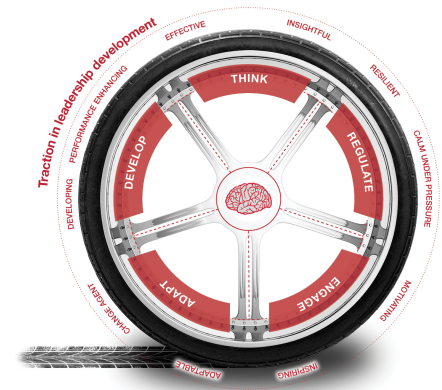

In this forum we'll discuss:

The Application of Neuroscience to Leadership, Change, Engagement & Performance.

Over the past 10 years, Neuroscience has started to emerge from the laboratories & is gradually being applied to the workplace. We think this is great – we all have a brain (although some may disagree!), so understanding it & applying that knowledge seems like a logical step. We've been applying neuroscience in many of our training, coaching & team programs for some time: many of our team are Neuroleadership TREAD accredited & have qualifications in the field. We've seen great success using Neuro-science to transform Leadership effectiveness in particular, but also huge applications in:

- Employee engagement & performance management
- Managing/Resilience to Change
- Diversity and Inclusion

We've seen higher engagement, better productivity & commitment from teams, & improvement of leadership, feedback, communication & change management skills; all of which transform performance and ongoing employee engagement.

We'll take you through an introductory overview of the brain & the application of neuroscience in the workplace, & ignite per discussion to explore how you can apply neuroscience findings to your work environment. We'll discuss examples of how it can improve leadership practices, change management, innovation and creativity, and employee engagement.

So come along & learn & discuss the principles of neuroscience in this practical, often humorous, definitely brain-changing & possibly life-changing discussion forum.
